Ti's time to start thinking about winter! The third 1 annual Adirondack Sports & Fitness Winter Expo will be on Saturday, November 20 from 10am-6pm and Sunday, November 21 from 10am-5pm at the newly renovated Saratoga Springs City Center. The expo will have a large selection of exhibitors plus sales, demos, clinics and family activities. Admission is FREE!

The Winter Expo will provide attendees with 80plus exhibitors offering a selection of outdoor gear, products, services and expert advice - plus many cool prizes and giveaways! Clubs, retailers, professionals and organizations will be on hand featuring everything from alpine skiing, snowboarding, cross-country skiing, snowshoeing, health/fitness, clothing, gear, outdoor getaways, events and races.

Attendees are invited to discover what's new for 2011 and take part in our interactive show features. Vendors will offer great sales from retailers and outfitters, product demos and club membership opportunities. Health and fitness professionals will share their expertise and encouragement, while travel and hospitality exhibitors will present wonderful trips, lodging

Exhibitor demos and activities will take place all weekend. A variety of seminars and clinics will be led by local experts and Adirondack Sports & Fitness magazine contributing writers. The 25-foot rock wall from Electric City Rock Gym will challenge the vertical skills of adults and children. Delicious, healthy food from Esperanto Restaurant will be available, such as doughboys, burritos, pizza and chili – so bring your

The U.S. Luge Association will offer wheeled luge rides for all ages all weekend. They're bringing the traveling luge ramp and sleds on wheels to offer rides to boys and girls, men and women, free of charge. Interested in ice climbing but not sure how to get started, you can try your hand at using ice tools on a special ice bouldering wall at the Cornerstone Climbing and Guiding booth. In addition, there will be snowshoeing and cross-country skiing demos at the Dion Snowshoes and NYSSRA Nordic booths.

For details, see the Attendee Guide on pages 9-11 of this issue. For updates and more info, visit AdkSports. com or call (518) 877-8788. We look forward to seeing you there!

Winter Hilding on Pitchoff Mountair

by Bill Ingersoll

s you drive NY Route 73 between Keene and Lake Placid, you are for several miles in the deep valley between two massive mountains. To the south is Cascade, one of the High Peaks and a true hulk of a mountain, rising nearly 2,000 feet above the highway. To the north is a smaller but perhaps more visually interesting mountain, rock-scarred Pitchoff.

Cascade can draw crowds like few others can on any fair-weather day; but Pitchoff, not so much. This has more to do with Pitchoff's lack of status and nothing at all to do with the quality of its views. At about 3,600 feet, Pitchoff falls well short of the 4,000-foot cut off for inclusion on the list of the Adirondacks' 46 High Peaks, and by extension it also falls off the radar screen of many hikers who only seem interested in those 46 peaks.

I mention this only because when you arrive at the trailhead you may be intimidated by the number of cars vying for parking space in the handful of roadside pullouts. The majority of these people are here to hike Cascade, not Pitchoff, so be prepared to enjoy a relatively quiet day on a highly scenic mountain.

Pitchoff is traversed by a five-mile trail with two trailheads on NY Route 73. This article describes a short outing to one of the mountain's most accessible gems, a large ledge at its southwestern end. This is an excellent snowshoe hike for people with limited time.

HOW TO GET THERE

There are two trailheads for Pitchoff Mountain on NY Route 73; the one for the trip described here is closest to the Cascade Mountain trailhead. It is located approximately 6.6 miles west of Keene, or 4.4 miles east of Adirondack Loj Road in North Elba. There are multiple pullouts for parking on both sides of the highway, all of them plowed for winter hikers.

THE TRAIL

The start of the trail is marked by a large sign. Not far past the trailhead register, the trail follows the edge of private land where the maple trees are strung together by sugaring tubes, waiting for the first spring thaws and the flowing sap they inspire. The initial grades are moderate, leading to a long and level bench high above the highway. At 0.7-mile and about 30 minutes, you reach a small ledge on the right with the first clear view of Cascade Mountain.

The level section ends at this point, with a massive rock knob looming above you. The summit of that knob is your destination, and for a brief time it appears that the trail is leading you straight to the steepest slopes! The trail drops from the level ridge into a col at the foot of the rock face, but then it veers to the left. It does climb one short-but-steep pitch, but then it contours around the side of the knob to a junction with an unmarked side trail originating on private land. Bearing right, the trail continues to contour below rock ledges before climbing moderately to a marked junction at 1.4 miles on Pitchoff's main ridgeline.

A left turn is the ridge trail that leads Pitchoff's other summits – a perfectly attractive route, though one not often used in winter. Most snowshoers bear right here, following a short spur trail to the open summit of the knob, with its spectacular view toward Mount VanHoevenberg and the High Peaks. Look for the familiar trinity of conical summits: Marcy on the left, Mount Colden in the middle, and then Algonquin on the right.

Cascade is the dominant landmark, though. You can trace the course of the stream that gives the mountain its name, from the frosty upper slopes to the deep groove eroded into the lower slopes where the icy cascade should be plainly visible. With some scouting, you should also be able to find views of the two Cascade Lakes at the foot of the mountain, immediately beside the highway.

If there is a wind, then you can seek shelter in the lee of some prominent boulders. The total hike to this summit is a mere 1.5 miles with 800 feet of vertical climbing. Allow about one-hour and 20 minutes for the ascent.

Attendee Guide

• Olympic Sports • Running • Snowboarding •

Snowshoeing • Sports Medicine • Telemark Skiing •

"Luge races at the Olympics are among the most exciting with thousands watching," said Fred Zimny, U.S. Luge coach and recruiter. "But with so few tracks, just four in North America, we have made it a point to bring ourselves to the masses. The Winter Expo will draw big crowds at the very start of the new season. It's our goal to introduce ourselves to many new fans, and with some luck, maybe future Olympians will emerge from the weekend."

In addition, participating luge racers will have the chance to become members of USLA for one-year for $10, including a T-shirt that will be issued onsite with a paid membership.

But best of all, if U.S. Luge spots some young talent with potential in the fastest sport on ice, those youngsters will be invited to a camp over the winter, stay at the Olympic Training Center, and learn luge on ice at the Olympic Sports Complex in Lake Placid.

"This will be a great experience for everyone involved," Fred continued. "But in the midst of the fun and games, we'll have a sharp eye for some of the area's best athletes who may want to try our exciting sport." For more information on the fastest sport on ice, visit usaluge.org.

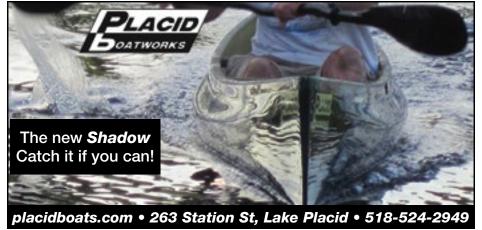

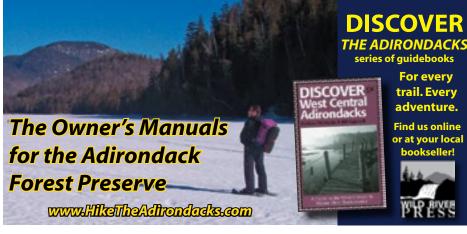

cool prizes. If you book a guided ice climbing day trip with Cornerstone during the Expo, you receive 10-percent off. For more info, go to cornerstoneclimbing.com.

Winter Raptor Fest 'Bird of Prey' and 'Free-Flight Raptor' Shows

At the Winter Raptor Fest booth, live Bird of Prey programs will be presented over the weekend. And a master falconer will do free-flight raptor shows on Saturday. These live bird of prey programs raise awareness of endangered and threatened birds of Washington County's Grasslands Important Bird Area. To learn more about the festival and pre-event activities, visit winterraptorfest.com.

THE NON-MEDICATED LIFE /

A Strategy for Sustainable Healthcare by Paul E. Lemanski, MD, MS, FACP

Medicines are a mainstay of American life and the healthcare system not only because they are perceived to work by the individual taking them, but also because their benefit may be shown by the objective assessment of scientific study. Clinical research trials have shown that some of the medicines of Western science may reduce the risk of heart attacks, strokes and cardiovascular death.

In the first 38 installments of The Non-Medicated Life, informed diet and lifestyle have been shown to accomplish naturally for the majority of individuals, many, if not most of the benefits of medications. Even more importantly, however, I believe that embracing the non-medicated life may perhaps provide one of the few viable strategies to make healthcare affordable in the future and thereby create a truly sustainable healthcare.

Sustainability is a concept typically applied to the environment but increasingly to other areas of human life. Sustainability suggests that there are actions, policies, and strategies both on the level of the collective and the individual, which serve to meet the present needs of society without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their needs. Sustainability suggests that resources be used in a responsible way which preserves non-renewable resources maximally for use by future generations while promoting renewable resources wherever possible.

Unfortunately, today Western civilization is involved in multiple actions, policies, and strategies that are not sustainable. Several examples come to mind. Our use of oil is most definitely not sustainable. At our present rate of use, 50 to at most 100 years of oil remain. Likewise our treatment of our own waste and refuse is not sustainable. There is only so much land to convert to landfills. Our economic practices are not sustainable. One can't spend more money than you have without passing the bill onto future generations. I would suggest that our healthcare in its current form is also not sustainable.

Our current healthcare system uses an insurance model to ensure its economic viability. As such, theoretically each individual in society pays a small amount of money into the system, which supplies the funds to care for the individual when sick. This insurance model works because the number of healthy individuals far exceeds those who are sick. However, if there is an increase in the number who are sick, then this model becomes economically unsustainable.

Unfortunately, our population is getting sicker despite significant improvements in our medical technology and the ability to manage disease. The regrettable increase in the number of sick individuals is a direct result of poor choices of diet and lifestyle that are made on a daily basis. Moreover, these poor choices are supported and reinforced by a food industry generally more interested in selling a food product than a whole food, and more interested in playing to convenience than to health.

This is the 39th in a series on optimal diet and lifestyle to help prevent and treat heart disease. Any planned change in diet, exercise or treatment should be discussed with and approved by your personal physician before implementation. The help of a registered dietitian in the implementation of dietary changes is strongly recommended.

In the last 30 years the incidence and prevalence of obesity has increased dramatically in America. The availability of drinks sweetened with sugar, the increase in portion size, the promotion of fast foods, the increase in food products, and a concomitant decrease in physical exercise all have contributed to this problem. With the increase in obesity has come an increase in the related diseases of diabetes, hypertension, high cholesterol, sleep apnea and heart disease. Most of the diseases and chronic problems for which physicians treat patients with drugs, as well as the medical and surgical procedures, for which they are sent are a direct result of lifestyle choices that are not consistent with good health. Yet these diseases and chronic problems as well as their cost are in large part preventable with low tech, low cost changes in diet and lifestyle.

Diabetes is perhaps the most telling example of just such a preventable disease. Its prevalence in the population has increased dramatically as a function of increasing body weight. Currently, there are 20-million Americans with diabetes and there are 40-million with metabolic syndrome or pre-diabetes. Those with metabolic syndrome are converting to diabetes at the rate of 11-percent per year. Within ten years there will be 60-million people with diabetes, less the ones who die. In those people with metabolic syndrome who are obese, a weight loss of just 20 pounds can reduce the conversion to diabetes by 57-percent. To allow a disease such as diabetes to increase unchecked in the population is non-sustainable from a financial standpoint.

In order to make healthcare sustainable, I would respectfully suggest that we need a strategy that allows our population to grow increasingly healthy, not increasingly sick. Given half a chance, the human body has remarkable recuperative and healing powers. But to function optimally the human body has metabolic tolerances, which are as important as the mechanical tolerances in the pistons and cylinders of a high performance engine. Even ten to 15 pounds of unneeded body weight will bring in to play secondary biochemical pathways, which while still allowing us to function do so at some significant cost to health.

Moreover, while it would be wonderful if true, the recuperative powers of the human body aren't tapped through natural supplements or medications. These powers are certainly not tapped by sitting on a sofa watching TV. These powers are tapped by a healthy diet, a healthy weight, moderation and daily exercise. This is a simple prescription, but apparently difficult to implement with consistency. Nevertheless, it is the cost we must be willing to pay to ensure a modicum of health and thus sustainable health care. Otherwise, we will need to rely on the proverbial bottle of pills and a fist full of dollars to try to avoid the consequences of our most serious health care problems.

of us had been married once before in a traditional style wedding so this time around we decided to have a different type of celebration. We are both involved in Hudson-Mohawk Road Runners Club and Albany Running Exchange, and we've made many friendships through the clubs, so we decided to make our wedding a 5K trail run at one of the most beautiful places we could think of - the Landis Arboretum in Esperance.

Ed and I had been to the arboretum on long romantic walks and had great memories of our time there. This is where we wanted to exchange our vows. With the help of the wonderful volunteers at Landis Arboretum and Josh Merlis of ARE, we had a wedding to plan and a 5K run to direct.

Naturally, invitations needed to go out. We decided that since our wedding included a run, our invitation would take the appearance of a race application. Family and friends got a big laugh when they opened it up, and we had to remind them that they needed to return it to us. We ordered bibs, designed our own technical T-shirt, and purchased packets to stuff - that included a CD with our favorite running mix. We even had our own packet stuffing party.

The Friday before the wedding/run, Ed and I went out to mark the course with directional flags, cones and tape. Landis Arboretum hosts a 5K trail run every year, so we were fortunate that the race director shared his course map. Most couples have rehearsal dinners, we marked our course!

The big day arrived and we headed out to the arboretum to decorate for our reception. Our table centerpieces were running sneakers with mums in each sneaker, and everything looked beautiful. The weather was perfect - low 80s, no humidity and sunny. Our guests started arriving and were directed to Marcia Adams (HMRRC volunteer coordinator) at the registration table to pick up their packet. Yes, all guests, whether running or not, were assigned a bib to wear for the race. It was fun watching them open the packets to find their unexpected race goodies.

Time for the bride and groom to get ready! Most brides need to worry about getting their hair done hours before the wedding, but not this bride. My wedding hairstyle consisted of a simple ponytail with a 'Bride' baseball cap and attached veil. My wedding dress was amazing! I wore a running top and running skirt, socks and white sneakers. My whole wedding ensemble was the cutest wedding outfit I could have ever dreamed of. Ed's outfit consisted of black running shorts and white running shirt, new sneakers, and a 'Groom' baseball cap. He looked awesome!

Before I got dressed I was presented with a large white bow from one of my friends. as a train. To my surprise, all of my female running friends wore the same bow in different colors to match their running outfits. They were my "trail maids." They all looked beautiful and it was a wonderful surprise to me.

Once dressed, I was off to the 500-year old oak tree to meet up with my handsome groom. My brother drove me to the beginning of the trail and my two boys met me – both dressed in running gear – and walked me up to the oak. Next to Ed, stood his son Frank, and under the oak were all of our family and friends dressed in running gear. Even the non-runners were dressed in sneakers and shorts, some wanting to walk the beautiful trails.

Our wedding vows were just what we wanted: simple and spiritual with a lot of meaning to us. Everything was perfect and I became Mrs. Edward Gillen! After our ceremony and a short walk to the start line, our 5K was about to begin. All of our friends felt that the right thing to do was to run behind us. We told them that if they did that they would lose out on the wonderful prizes that we had. Yes, we had prizes for the top three male and female runners.

After a quick running prayer and a throw of the bouquet, off we went. It was so nice having the people that are so special to us running in our wedding. My son David even gave it the old college try and ran the first mile. Our non-running family and friends walked the trails and enjoyed the beautiful views. Our 5K had a water stop with champagne glasses filled with Gatorade and water. Ed and I stopped and had our first toast together as Mr. and Mrs. Gillen. We came over the finish line to our new beginning. Our finish was announced by Josh and the ARE crew with wonderful music and a finisher's clock.

Once the results were posted and we finished our meals, the award ceremony began. Our awards were coffee mugs with gift cards inside the mug. Our winners also received the most beautiful bouquets made by one of our guests, Gail Hein. A race titled "Throw The Bouquet 5K" had to have bouquets as prizes!

After the award ceremony, we cut the cake. The top of the butter cream cake had the logo that also adorned the shirts that each guest received. The cake was perfect for the occasion. After the cake cutting, the music and dancing began and we danced the afternoon away in the beautiful open fields of Landis. What a wonderful wedding! 📫

Water, Fire and Mud

by Debra-Jane Batcher

Tt took my breath away - the water was that L cold. And deep! I couldn't touch the bottom without going over my nose. The initial plunge was thrilling and I gasped for breath and then laughed. This was fun, fun, fun! Challenging and doable I dragged myself up the steep wooden platform out of the pond, grateful that my quad was quieted by the cold water.

This was the Warrior Dash at Windham Mountain in Windham, and I (female, 51 years old) was having the time of my life. On September 18, the Warrior Dash arrived with close to 15,000 registrants for two days of racing. Half-hour heats of a few hundred warriors each were released by huge surges of jet flames and glorious fan fare.

Springing forward upon release with warrior whoops and cries, we the warriors took on the first challenge: a hill. This wasn't just any hill, it was long and steep, and it rose up a good mile - and took down every warrior. They should call it "Humble Hill" because that hill humbled even the most muscle bound and lithe legged warrior around. Everyone at some point walked.

During my humbled dash up the hill I reflected on several conversations I had with my warrior girlfriends. Some were worried warriors who were concerned they wouldn't be strong enough for this race. We were all doing lots of push-ups. But would it be enough?

I, in my ignorance (or should I say arrogance) assured everyone that this would be an easy race because "If it was too challenging, it wouldn't be safe." Humble Hill got my attention really quick: this race was definitely challenging and it wasn't safe.

Once up the hill, over the tires, over the warrior wall, and through the tunnels (annoying and tweaked my quad) we plunged into "Slithering Swamp." The swamp was really a cute, little, frigid pond, which was deep in the middle. Now we were having some fun!

With the healing balm of the frigid water encouraging my steps I surged forward and blessedly down the hill. Now the Warrior Dash was living up to its name and reputation. What goes up usually goes down and so did Humble Hill. As we descended we dragged our sorry bodies up and down rope walls, across long plank bridges, dodged slippery muddy rocks, rocked down steep declines: quads, calves and hams afire. The warrior within each of us was very happy and having such warrior fun because it was not all that safe and not all that easy. Some warriors took to walking and that was okay.

The last three obstacles of the race started with the "Catskill Skid" - a great big plastic downhill slide ending with a muddy pit to land in. Some warriors totally flew down the slide, others like me "stuck" to the slide, and had to push themselves down - ugh! Next time I will take a running leap onto the slide and hopefully land face first into the pit. Just like a real warrior. Next after the slide (this was the only thing I was afraid of) were two walls of fire. The fire was a lot taller than the pictures show. I actually hesitated before jumping over and probably singed the bottom of my shoes.

The second wall was easier and I achieved some serious height on my jump. The last obstacle was the "Muddy Mayhem" mud pit. Though it was contrived; a manmade pit watered, and soiled over and over by warrior assistants, judiciously ornamented and sporadically laced with barbed wire across it and about two feet above it. It was a glorious warrior mud bath! Warriors arose from the pit crowned from head to foot with dirty, slimy, slick, mucky mud, and they couldn't be happier. And I was one of them - a warrior baptized in a frigid pond, burned by fire and crowned in mud. What more could a warrior want?

There are, as we all know, other warrior desires and one is BEER. Warriors need beer especially after working really hard to prove one is a real warrior. Smartly, the Warrior Dash provided lots of beer. The first one was free (included in your registration) and the rest was up to you. By the time the award ceremony took place many warriors had rewarded themselves well. I had to wait around for the ceremony as I had placed second in my age-group. (They don't mail the awards. One must be present to receive it.) The award was a cute, little metal helmet and stand. Going up on stage to receive it was much harder than the race itself. My legs were shaking; they never shake when I run. But this warrior likes bling and I wanted that helmet! I have it at work, on my desk, to remind me when I need the warrior within, she will arise and she doesn't need to be a muddy mess to prove it. 🜲

Debra-Iane Batcher (im.anarkhia@ gmail.com) is a female warrior who runs whenever possible. She has a husband, two sons and a dog named Frank which comprises her East Berne household. She is tolerated and loved.

Enjoy the Power of the River —

River systems are wonderful resources. The same rivers used to produce renewable hydropower also provide outstanding recreational opportunities for the public. We all need to share our rivers — safely. Every year in New York State, hundreds of people drown or are hospitalized for injuries that occur in the water* and 90% of people who drown are not wearing life jackets.

As the owner and operator of 75 hydropower facilities and 50 riverfront recreation areas in New York, Brookfield encourages you to have fun and be safe by wearing a U.S. Coast Guard-approved personal floatation device.

Whether you are fishing, boating, snowmobiling, or cross country skiing, Brookfield reminds you that dangers exist on water any time of the year, and that conditions can change quickly and without notice. Avoid areas such as dams, intake and water conveyance structures, gates, powerhouses and substations. Use only designated recreation areas, respect all warning signs, buoys, sirens, booms, barriers and fences.

Always check water conditions before you recreate. One source is Waterline: http://www.h2oline.com or call 1-800-452-1742 (fishing edition) or 1-800-452-1737 (boaters edition).
