Place to Be!

By Laura Clark

f there is a staycation in your immediate future or if you are hosting out-of-towners, do consider the wide variety of early summer events offered in the Capital-Saratoga Region and the Adirondacks. Take a lesson from the proverbial New York City dwellers who have never visited the Statue of Liberty, and experience all that our region has to offer. While undertaking a destination race is definitely exciting, you might discover that you can attain that PR simply by sticking to familiar food and your own bed.

Saratoga's premier early summer event is the 12th annual Firecracker 4 celebrating our country's birthday at NY's largest 4th of July race. According to race director Patrick Lynskey, "This year we will have more emphasis on the spirt of the day," with the Veteran Business Council runners posting colors and reenactors from the NY 2nd Continental Artillery sending us off with musket fire. Both the newly designed bibs and age group medals will be flag-shaped and the 10th Mountain Division New Orleans Jazz Band will be one of the 20 bands on course for your running entertainment, pushing you along to a faster time. No need for headphones here! To encourage early sign-ups, the first 3,700 runners will score newly designed, holiday-themed tech shirts.

The four-mile route is challenging through the city and neighborhood streets with several hills, guaranteed to put you in the fighting spirit. Awards include $7,000 in cash prizes and 400 medals/prizes. Fleet Feet Sports sponsored Tuesday free pub practice runs at 6pm from May 29 to June 19 will be held at The Barrelhouse, with a final rehearsal on June 26, which will launch from Farmer's Hardware - all with a complimentary post-run beverage. Runners are encouraged to align themselves with a team, whether it's USATF Adirondack, military, public safety, scholastic, Ainsley's Angels - or Run Your Colors where teams with the most runners win money for charity. There is no greater incentive to give your all when you know your teammates are depending on you. The Children's Museum of Saratoga is now presenting the Kids' One-Mile Sparkler Run, making this a true

MARATHON AT SARATOGA SPA STATE PARK.

Saratoga's All-American Celebration includes a parade and patriotic pooches at 11am, BBQ and dessert fest from 11:30am-3:30pm, The Audiostars from 6:30-9:30pm, and fireworks at 9:30pm (saratogajuly4th.com). The celebration begins immediately after the Sparkler Run, including a free adult beverage for runners from Farmer's Hardware and Gaffney's. Plan on remaining for what is truly an all-day celebration! (firecracker4.

Saratoga Springs's other well-established event is the 22nd annual Silks & Satins 5K Jeff Clark Memorial Race on Saturday, July 21 based from the Fasig-Tipton Pavilion with its iconic daybreak views of a classic thoroughbred horse racing workout on the Oklahoma Training Track to inspire your own warmup. Match your pace to the four-footed athletes as you navigate a flat and fast tour of historic neighborhoods.

PROTECTING THE RIGHTS OF INJURED PEDESTRIANS, BICYCLISTS AND RUNNERS IN UPSTATE NEW YORK. YOUR CASE. OUR CAUSE.

Bicyclists and pedestrians face grave risks from motorists - especially distracted ones but solutions are out there

By George LaMarche III, Esq. & Andrew Safranko, Esa.

s exercise enthusiasts, we are well aware that bicycling, running, and walking are among the healthiest physical activities imaginable.

But let's be clear on one thing, bicycling, running, and walking on New York's roadways also are inherently dangerous activities. For 75 years or more, our surface transportation infrastructure has been designed for conflict between automobiles and anyone else who dares get in their way. Despite attempts in recent years to improve overall traffic safety, deaths of pedestrians and bicyclists from crashes with cars are on the increase. And distracted driving from smartphone use is only making us less safe, as a generation of kids who grew up glued to their phones takes its place behind the steering wheel.

Legislation favoring the rights of motorists over pedestrians began in the early 20th century, when it became a crime to walk in the streets except where and when it was expressly permitted - and the term "jaywalking" was created to blame the offending pedestrians. And all these years later, those who continue to favor the rights of motorists above all others don't give up easily. For example, the New York State Legislature once again will not pass a law requiring motorists to stay at least three-feet from bicyclists when passing them. Without more and better bike and walking lanes, and legislation to keep cars at a defined distance from bicyclists, we leave the safety of cyclists and pedestrians to the willingness of drivers to maintain awareness of their surroundings at all times. Unfortunately, both anecdotal and researchbased evidence says this is simply not the reality of how many drivers think and act.

French psychological scientists, Nadine Chaurand and Patricia Delhomme, concluded in a 2012 study whose findings were published in the journal Accident Analysis and Prevention, that there is a fundamental difference in how cyclists and drivers perceive risk perception on the road. Cyclists believe the greatest crash risks come from bike-car interactions, while drivers see more danger in their interactions with other cars, rather than bikes. In other words, while cyclists have to be aware of all traffic dangers to avoid injury or death, motorists are more content to focus on the risks posed by other cars - and to be less careful about interactions with bicycles and pedestrians.

Road-Sharing Laws

To protect yourself from the inherent risks of bicycling, a good place to begin is knowing the law. NYS Vehicle and Traffic Law provides that bicyclists, as well as inline skaters, are "granted all of the rights and shall be subject to all of the duties applicable to the driver of a vehicle." (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1231). In other words, bicyclists are treated by law pretty much the same as motorists, in that they are authorized to use the roadway and ride on the right side moving in the same direction as car traffic. This of course is well understood by experienced cyclists, though it can be surprising and frustrating how many amateur and rogue bicyclists ride on the sidewalk or on the wrong side of the roadway, or otherwise flout traffic laws.

The fact that New York law gives bicyclists the same general rights of way as motorists does not provide them automatic access to full use of the roadway. In fact, the law first directs cyclists and skaters to ride in "a usable bicycle or inline skate lane," or if such a lane does not exist, "near the right-hand curb or edge of the roadway or upon a usable righthand shoulder in such a manner as to prevent undue interference with the flow of traffic except when preparing for a left turn or when reasonably necessary to avoid conditions that would make it unsafe to continue along near the right-hand curb or edge." Such conditions include fixed or moving objects, pedestrians, animals, surface hazards, and lanes "too narrow for a bicycle ... and a vehicle to travel safely side-by-side within the lane." (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1234a).

That last passage hints at a frustrating disconnect between state traffic law as written, and the ways in which New York lags behind other states in keeping up with best practices to improve bicycle safety - like implementing a three-foot-passing law. Unlike many states, New York does not mandate "Bikes May Use Full Lane" signs, which, studies show, improve both bicyclists' and motorists' understanding of the law - which does permit cyclists to move over and ride into the center of the lane when the roadway is too narrow to share.

Again, experienced cyclists should be familiar with most of the laws that apply to operating their bikes on state roadways, including required equipment such as brakes, lamps and reflectors (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1236), how to make proper hand signals (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1237), and so on. And you probably already know that you are prohibited from riding your bicycle on interstate highways; for other restricted-access highways, consult local postings. One other law that bears repeating is that any bicycle entering a roadway from a driveway, parking lot, alley, or sidewalk must come to a complete stop before doing so (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1234c).

Laws that Protect Bicyclists

Despite the fact that most of our roadway infrastructure was designed primarily for the convenience of automobiles, and that the movement to redesign cities and towns more favorably for bicycle and pedestrian use has only slowly begun to make up lost ground, cyclists and walkers do have rights, most notably in the state vehicle and traffic declaration that drivers must exercise "due care" regardless of who technically has the right of way:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law to the contrary, every driver of a vehicle shall exercise due care to avoid colliding with any bicyclist, pedestrian, or domestic animal upon any roadway and shall give warning by sounding the horn when necessary" (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1146).

In the absence of a 3-foot law, vehicle and traffic law does provide that a vehicle operator overtaking a bicycle riding on the same side of a roadway "shall pass to the left of such bicycle at a safe distance until safely clear thereof" (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1122a). While "at a safe distance" is vague and subjective compared to "a distance of at least three feet," it does give bicyclists rights that, under the best of circumstances, keep motorists from passing too closely - and potential grounds for legal action if a crash occurs.

Some cyclists consider "doorings" to be one of the nastiest and also most common threats to their safety on busy roadways where cars are allowed to park. And despite the nonchalance with which some drivers open first and look second, this offense is covered in state vehicle and traffic law: "No person shall open the door of a motor vehicle on the side available to moving traffic ... until it is reasonably safe to do so and can be done without interfering with the movement of other traffic" (NY Veh. & Traf. Law § 1214).

Of course you don't want to be hit with a "door surprise," but you have legal recourse if it happens to you.

Trends and Technology in Bicyclist and Pedestrian Safety

Three-Foot Passing Laws - The good news is that 30 states now have them. The bad news is that New York doesn't, as the bills introduced each year continue to stall in the state Assembly Transportation Committee.

"Complete Streets" Initiatives - These are becoming more and more popular with cities and towns across the country. There is no one-size-fits-all formula, but a Complete Streets plan is designed to increase transportation choices while making streets safer for everyone. This may involve sidewalk improvements; bike lanes (any bike lane is usually better than none, though "protected" bike lanes where the lane is sheltered from car traffic by a barrier or by parked cars are the safest); bus-only lanes and safer public transit stops; and "scramble crossings," in which all car traffic at an intersection is halted for a cycle of pedestrian-only movement, including diagonal crossing.

Driverless Vehicles - Also called "autonomous" vehicles, these are coming whether we like them or not, and we urge you consider liking them, based on the fact that they will be programmed to be safer than most human drivers. The pedestrian fatality in Arizona earlier this year involving a driverless car reinforced calls for near-perfect technology, but also underscored the grim irony that cars with drivers kill 16 U.S. pedestrians a day.

Smartphone Blocking - Now there are laws everywhere restricting drivers' use of handheld devices but they're hard to enforce, and if you've never seen drivers looking down at their phones while zooming along on the road, then you probably never leave the house. Apparently, the technology to block drivers' phones exists, but the devil is in the details and the politics. 📥

THE VIEW FROM RATTLESNAKE KNOB AT FOUR PEAKS, RECENTLY PURCHASED BY ADIRONDACK LAND TRUST. NANCY LANE

Purchase Expands Recreational Opportunities in Wilmington and Jay

KEENE - The Adirondack Land Trust announced the purchase of Four Peaks, a 600-acre tract in the towns of Jay and Wilmington adjacent to Wilmington Wild Forest's Beaver Brook tract, which is popular for mountain biking, trail running, hiking and hunting.

In Wilmington, mountain biking is powering a revival of small businesses catering to cyclists. In 2017, Wilmington was named one of "America's 20 Best Mountain Bike Towns" by National Geographic. The community hosts a variety of trail systems built mainly by Barkeater Trails Alliance in partnership with the Adirondack Mountain Club and Student Conservation Association. BETA is a volunteer-driven organization that maintains over 100 miles of ski and bike trails across six Adirondack towns.

NYS has identified the Four Peaks tract in its Open Space Conservation Plan for the potential to expand multi-use recreational opportunities from the Beaver Brook trail network, which features 8.5 miles of singletrack bike trail. The Land Trust will conduct an ecological inventory to ensure that future trails are sited with consideration of conservation values. The Land Trust will consult with partners: BETA, Town of Jay, Town of Wilmington, and NYS Dept. of Environmental Conservation to plan trails that connect the Wilmington network to Jay. The land remains closed to public recreation in the meantime.

The Adirondack Land Trust worked with the estate of the late Martin Schwalbaum to $honor\,his\,wish\,to\,conserve\,Four\,Peaks, which\,he\,had\,managed\,as\,a\,low-impact\,cabin\,resort.$ The purchase price was $509,000; the Adirondack Land Trust expects to incur $700,000 in cumulative costs before anticipated transfer to the state as Forest Preserve. Founded in 1984, $the \,Adiron dack \,Land \,Trust \,works \,to \,protect \,farms \,and \,forests, \,undeveloped \,shoreline, \,scenic$ vistas and other lands contributing to the quality of life of our communities as well as the wildness and rural character of the Adirondacks. Go Take a Hike Event at Clifton Park-Halfmoon Public Library

LAKE GEORGE - If you are curious about how to get started hiking, want to learn more about hiking, or if you are hiking your way through the Adirondack 46 High Peaks, join other enthusiasts at the Clifton Park-Halfmoon Library on Tuesday, June 12 at 6:30pm. Topics covered will include what to bring, safety, family fun, hiking destinations, trail habits and practices, and the ADK Fire Tower Challenge. Registration for this event is requested at cphlibrary.org, in person or by calling 518-371-8622. The library will debut its loanable backpack collection at this program. Loanable backpacks have been filled with hiking books, maps, a flashlight, first aid kit and more.

This program is presented by Jim Schneider, coeditor of the book, Views From On High: Fire Tower Trails in the Adirondacks and Catskills, now in its second edition. This guide enables hikers, history buffs, and others fond of Adirondack and Catskill trails to visit and learn about 30 historic fire towers. Detailed trail descriptions are accompanied by numerous photographs and maps as well as an essay about these structures written by historic preservationist Wesley H. Haynes. A complementary activity to Views since the guide's inception, the ADK Fire Tower Challenge requires hikers to ascend and document at least 23 of 30 fire tower summits found in the Adirondacks and Catskills. A patch is awarded for those who complete the challenge.

On June 12, the library will introduce its own, less vigorous hiking challenge. The goal of the Library Challenge is to have families hike a fire tower summit and email a picture or tag the library (#cphlibrary) in social media posts. Photos can be emailed to cphreference@ sals.edu. The library will collect and print out all family pictures and build a photo tower. Each new picture will be entered into a drawing for a grand prize to be awarded on August 31. Staff librarian and ADK member Jim Schneider, an experienced hiker is a Winter 46er and Northeast 115er, he has been an active ADK volunteer for more than 30 years, including service as a High Peaks Summit Steward, lean-to adopter and trail steward. He is co-creator of the ADK Fire Tower Challenge. 📥

Capital District and Bethlehem Triathlon Clubs Present "The Voice" of Ironman

ALBANY - The Capital District Triathlon Club and Bethlehem Tri Club are thrilled to welcome the most iconic race emcee on the Ironman circuit, Mike Reilly aka "The Voice." With numerous Ironman races taking place all over the world, Mike has a busy schedule and he will again emcee the 20th annual Ironman Lake Placid on July 22. He has emceed countless Ironman races, and is a wealth of knowledge for all triathletes. Mike Reilly begins each race at the starting line, keeping athletes calm as they anticipate the day ahead. He then waits at the finish line to welcome home each and every finisher with the sacred words "You're an Ironman!" Mike will be sharing some of his most memorable Ironman and Ironman Lake Placid experiences. He will also share some common mistakes he has seen triathletes make on race day over the years and other great tips to make your race day successful. Most importantly, Mike will inspire all of those in attendance to go after their biggest, scariest, and most audacious goals this season. If you are racing Ironman Lake Placid (or any triathlon distance this summer), this is definitely a great event to kickoff IMLP race week and get you pumped up. The event will be held on Tuesday, July 17 at 6pm in the Albany area (location TBA). Mike Reilly will speak from 6:30-8:30pm. Come meet "The Voice" of those three little words that mean so much, and give Mike a big welcome from the Capital Region. For more info on this event, visit Capital District Triathlon Club on facebook.com. 📥

Brant Lake Bike Park Opens

BRANT LAKE - The Brant Lake Bike Park, a newly developed singletrack mountain biking destination, opens on Sunday, June 10 at 9am. The park is on land directly behind The Hub, a bike shop, cafe, and craft beer pub. The trails were designed and built by Wilderness Property Management, a local professional trail building company. Mountain bikers are familiar with their work at the Gurney Lane Mountain Bike Park in Queensbury and the mountain bike trails at Ski Bowl Park in North Creek.

The park is unique and the first of its kind in the area. Not just because of the incredible and varying terrain, but due to the means of the project's completion. The trail system is on land owned by Drew Cappabianca of The Hub and was professionally constructed. Funds for construction were raised through a Kickstarter campaign, individual donations and sponsorships. This allows the park to be free and open to the public. Grand opening festivities include a send-off ceremony, live music, and a tap-takeover by Common Roots Brewing at The Hub, and six miles of fresh singletrack mountain bike riding. 🔺 he St. Regis Canoe Area covers over 18,000 acres and is the only designated canoe area in New York State. There are over 50 motor-less ponds of various sizes within the SRCA and you can find 70 designated primitive campsites spread out over 20 of those ponds – camping is limited to eight persons per site. Marked "carries" of varying lengths and difficulty connect many of the ponds. You can easily spend as much time on your feet as on your butt while traveling through the area. St. Regis Mountain (2,874' elevation) and Long Pond Mountain (2,530') are the notable peaks in the SRCA and both have marked hiking trails to their open summits.

The SRCA is managed similarly to designated "Wilderness Areas," but the Adirondack Park State Land Master Plan allows for mountain biking on designated trails within a "Canoe Area," as well as the use of motor vehicles, motorized equipment, and aircraft by administrative personnel for purposes designed to preserve or enhance the water or fishery resources. These uses are restricted primarily to the 4.7-mile Fish Pond Truck Trail and the 0.25-mile St. Regis Pond Truck Trail. That being said, on all of my visits I have never seen a vehicle nor a hike

For the purposes of this article, we will travel across the area from east to west. You can start on Lower St. Regis Lake at Paul Smith's College or on Upper St. Regis Lake at the end of St. Regis Carry Road, at a boat launch next to the post office. You will have to share these lakes with motorboats and sailboats, especially in summer. The shores are developed but the fancy "camps" found along the shoreline can be visually entertaining. If you have time, a detour to the west end of Upper St. Regis Lake will bring you to Camp Topridge, an Adirondack-style great camp consisting of 60 buildings. A little south of Topridge, in Spring Bay, is the start of a trail up to the summit fire tower on St. Regis Mountain where views include most of the SRCA, the Saranac Lakes, as well as most of the High Peaks. The mountain and fire tower are often in view from many of the ponds in the SRCA.

The first carry of our journey starts after paddling 0.7-mile from the boat launch, passing Roiley Bog, and a couple of islands. The carry to Bog Pond is short and sweet. Bog Pond is tiny but you may want to take things slowly so as to examine the fascinating plants along its boggy shores. Technically, you are not yet in the SRCA.

Another short and easy carry leads into Bear Pond, where the water is clear and deep – quite a contrast from Bog Pond's brown water. The lean-tos seen here are on private land, but the west and south shores are state land, and are in the SRCA. On most of my trips, I like to paddle unhurriedly the long way around each pond to see what I may find, and to maximize my time in the canoe.

Next, there is a moderate 0.2-mile carry to Little Long Pond. Fish can be seen swimming by, darting in and out of the lily pads, in the pond's shallow east end. Loons and osprey nest here and civilization now seems far away. Little Long, at 1,654', is the highest elevation pond along our route.

Another 0.2-mile carry leads to Green Pond. The water of this small glacial pond is deep, clear and green, as its name implies. A little-used 0.7-mile carry leads south to Little Clear Pond. Most folks take the short carry to St. Regis Pond.

On St. Regis Pond, a west wind can create some choppy waters as it blows across its 1.5-mile-long length, but the prudent paddler can hide behind an occasional island and make some headway into the wind. St. Regis has 12 campsites and one lean-to, and is one of the most popular ponds in the SRCA. When I last visited, the loons were quite agitated, prolifically vocalizing their tremolos. After pulling out my spyglass, I spotted a pair of bald eagles flying above, and waiting for an opportunity to snatch a loon chick for their next meal.

From the south bay, a 0.6-mile carry leads to Little Clear Pond and one of the most-used entry points to the SRCA, a sandy beach at its southwest end. Camping and fishing are not allowed on Little Clear because the nearby state fish hatchery uses it for breeding land-locked salmon.

Moving west from St. Regis Pond, you have some choices. It is a smooth, "wheelable" carry of over two miles to Fish Pond, along the St. Regis Pond and Fish Pond Truck Trails. For those who prefer to stay in their boats, you can try paddling the outlet of St. Regis Pond, the West Branch of the St. Regis River, below the fish barrier dam. The last time I tried this, it took me 30 minutes to get to Ochre Pond – I went over five beaver dams and some shallow obstructions. I returned to St. Regis Pond on the 0.6-mile carry trail, which took me 12 minutes with the canoe over my head. I enjoyed the stream paddling more than the carry though.

From Ochre, the carry trail to Fish is 1.4 miles-long, and goes along an esker – and through some beautiful old-growth forest. You can break up the carry by detouring through Mud Pond; you may find some mud but the pond is serene and scenic.

Fish Pond has two lean-tos and a couple of designated campsites. Short carries lead into Little Fish, Little Long (not the same as the one to the east) and Lydia Ponds. There is a good chance you won't see other people on these as you are now well away from civilization. When I camped on Little Long (west) the campfire ring was inhabited by snakes.

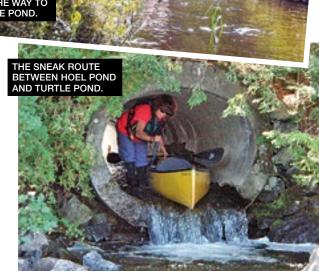

From Little Long, a short carry leads to Kit Fox Pond, then another 0.27-mile carry drops you at Nellie Pond. From Nellie it is a rough 1.2-mile carry to a beaver pond. Soon after leaving Nellie, a short detour goes to Bessie Pond – this lovely pond is worth the side-trip and makes for a good spot to take a break.

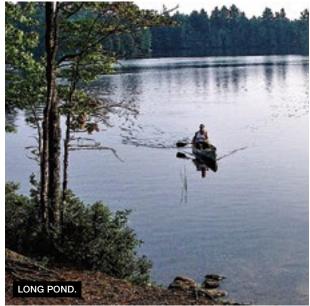

After the beaver pond, it is another 0.35-mile walk to Long Pond. One of the larger ponds in the area with over eight miles of shoreline. Long Pond is very popular because relatively easy access makes it a desirable destination for both campers and day-trippers. It is an easy 0.25-mile carry from a parking area on Floodwood Road or a hop, skip and a jump via Turtle and Slang ponds from an access on Hoel Pond.

Long Pond's attractions include a route into Pink and Little Pink ponds, a great swimming beach at the start of the carry to Slang Pond, and a 1.6-mile hike past Mountain Pond and up Long Pond Mountain. Many loons make their summer homes on Long Pond. I've witnessed a fight over territory between two of them; this was quite the spectacle to watch as they poked at each other with their beaks and punched with their wings.

My preferred map is the Adirondack Paddlers Map – North or Adirondack Paddlers Map – St. Regis Canoe Wilderness (Close-Up Series) by Paddlesports Press, which can be found at outfitters. More info and a map of campsites can be found on NYSDEC's website at dec.ny.gov/lands/70572.html.

met Tyler in February at the Saratoga Springs Public Library before his presentation, 7,000 Miles to a Wilderness Ethic. I was unable to attend the program that evening because I had to work, but I talked to attendees as they poured out of the community room, and they were impressed. Tyler captivated the packed audience with stories about completing his thru-hikes, through photographs and an entertaining retelling of the quest, sparking several with wanderlust and others of recollections of their youthful adventures. Despite being on the wrong side of the doors that evening, the booming voice of Tyler seeped into the library for all of us to hear a muffled version of Dr. Seuss' "The Lorax."

UNLESS someone like you cares a whole awful lot, nothing is going to get better. It's not.

Tyler's love of the wilderness began in Old Forge, with the woods and waterways right out his front door. Like any local kid, he enjoyed fishing, mountain biking, and worked at a marina. Continuing a 25-yearold family tradition, parents Tom and Pam Socash, would bring Tyler and his younger siblings, Nikki, Trey and Eric for a weeklong camping trip in the Adirondacks. The early immersions into wildness were formative in his initial connection with the water, woods, and the wildlife in the Adirondack Forest Preserve. A desire to share his personal connection with the public lands through exposure, education and stewardship grew in his youth. After earning a master's degree in school counseling, his life circled back to his love of hiking and the outdoors.

His parents may have planted the seed, but Joe Bogardus, an accomplished hiker from Keene, served as a mentor for Tyler's endurance endeavors. Tyler and Joe hiked throughout the Adirondack High Peaks together, culminating with a 46er finish atop Mount Colden. The whole Socash family was present for this seminal moment, and Tyler's adventures were just getting started. The day after completing his degree at the University of Rochester, Tyler embarked on the 7,000-mile thru-hiking journey across the Pacific Crest Trail, Te Araroa Trail in New Zealand, and the Appalachian Trail. This adventure led to his speaker series around the region, and our first encounter.

Many long-distance hikers find themselves at a crossroads in their life, whether at the end of an educational milestone like Tyler or being between jobs, retiring or embarking on an emotional or spiritual journey. Thru-hikers need to have discipline and be willing to make sacrifices. Saying goodbye to friends and family and saving up money are the less-glamorous aspects of preparing for the adventure of a lifetime; practical preparedness, is an element not be overlooked. Tyler was able to test his gear and stamina by completing the Northville-Placid Trail, the Firetower Challenge, and the 90-Miler Classic canoe race. Thru-hiking will challenge you mentally, physically, emotionally and spiritually - sometimes all at once! Tyler did his best to plan and prepare himself for success.

Even though he started his thru-hike solo, he joined many hikers, and formed "trail families" along the way. Hiking with an eclectic mix of individuals from different backgrounds and sharing the same walk in the woods turned out to be the social experience Tyler was looking for when he was feeling alone. "It's important to have an immersion experience where you surround yourself with people from different countries, with different backgrounds, and different beliefs," Tyler reflected. "These people will challenge you to become the best possible version of yourself, even if you can't process it at the time." After finishing the Appalachian Trail, Tyler's goal to educate the public about wildness was urgently pursued.

The yearlong immersion into wilderness inspired Tyler to defend rare wildlife habitats in the Adirondack Park. He was hired as the Outdoor Skills Coordinator at the Adirondack Mountain Club, where he works on instilling a wilderness ethic in recreationalists, and promotes the tenets of Leave No Trace in each course that he instructs. He joined the Adirondack Wilderness Advocates as an activist, to promote the intangibles of wildness, and to generate interest in the Adirondack Park's remaining remote areas. Additionally, in an effort to meld humor with conservation efforts, with his friends Matt Baer, Wade Bastian and Jeremy Utz, he has co-created and serves as co-host to the Foot Stuff Podcast - which spotlights outdoor adventure, antics, and activism around the country.

Tyler's activism is outspoken, but aligns well with his values to be authentic, make a difference and be compassionate. Since 1894, the Adirondack Forest Preserve lands have been protected from logging, sale, lease and development by the "forever wild" clause of the NYS Constitution. Through education, grass roots efforts and advocacy for the preserve, Tyler tries to gain voter support to prevent the human scars that are created by mining and development. "Rare wilderness areas within our country, totaling less than 3% of the contiguous United States, need passionate defenders like you and me."

Recently the Boreas Ponds Tract has captivated Tyler and he has hiked in five times. The tract includes New York's largest high-elevation wetland complex. It's the size of Manhattan, but unlike Manhattan, it's currently remote, void of public roads, and it provides a rare silent soundscape. Wildlife abounds in the tract, with denizens such as moose, black bear, loons, marten, snowshoe hare, red-tailed hawks, pileated woodpeckers, great blue herons, American woodcocks, brook trout, and the threatened Bicknell's thrush calling it home. "The tract is one of the last remaining vestiges of wildness in the entire northeast, underscoring its wild significance," Tyler added.

In protest of the controversial use of the Boreas Pond Wilderness area, on November 15, 2017, Tyler walked 47 miles in less than 24 hours from Blue Ridge Road on the southern border of the Boreas Ponds Tract to Ray Brook, and delivered a powerful statement to the Adirondack Park Agency. His point: if you can walk across the High Peaks landscape, the largest remaining wilderness in the northeast, in less than a day, then how much more wildness are we willing to sacrifice in the name of more roads? Tyler says, "It would be a shame to bargain away rare remoteness for more motorized use."

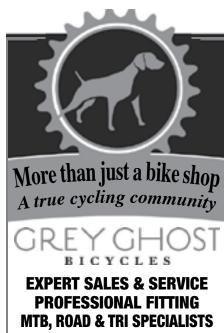

He left 1,882 more signed petitions on the APA's desk, which he carried the entire way on the journey. In February 2018, Governor Andrew Cuomo signed off on the Adirondack Park Agency's classification of the Boreas Ponds Tract. The APA voted 8-1 in February to split the tract between two classifications: motor-free Wilderness and the less-restrictive Wild Forest. There also is a small Primitive Area near the foot of Boreas Ponds. In Tyler's opinion, this compromise is in contrast to "Forever Wild" by allowing motor vehicles into the park, when walking and leaving a lighter footprint is feasible. Moving forward from this decision, Tyler is looking to provide public input, and through letters and articles to promote the best plan to preserve the intangibles of wildness that he has come to cherish: silence, solitude and remoteness. Roads after all, are everywhere; that final 1% of Adirondack wildness is not.

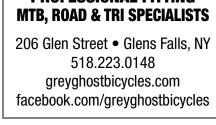

Tyler still has hope and will continue to educate New Yorkers and visitors on the value in protecting this pristine wildlife habitat, which in turn adds charm to the Adirondack Park and brings tourism here. Through the Adirondack Mountain Club, he will teach a course on thru-hiking where "students" will hike the Northville-Placid Trail, and learn the basics – how to pack gear and what to bring. In April he did his first TEDx Talk at the University of Rochester, titled Tyler Socash: Torch of Preservation. It will be available to watch on YouTube in the course of the year.

By the end of June, Tyler will have completed his quest to hike the Northeast 111 peaks over 4,000 feet, which includes the Adirondack 46, Hunter and Slide in the Catskills, as well as the some of the highest peaks in the east: Washington, Jefferson and Adams in New Hampshire's White Mountains. This challenge began in 2006 and will finish on Camel's Hump in Vermont. the highest undeveloped peak in the Green Mountains. Although one of the easier mountains to climb in the challenge, it overlooks home by offering views of the Adirondack High Peaks across the Champlain Valley where Tyler can once again enjoy the intangibles of the wilderness.

hile the "early season" for mountain biking is generally considered to be the middle spring, for us snow-filled northern New Yorkers early season riding is best defined by the months of June and July. This is the time when our trail systems fully dry out and our legs steadily come back into shape. We'll touch base on some of the best mountain bike friendly trail systems from the Capital Region to the Adirondacks that will help get you back into the riding groove!

North Bethlehem Town Park, located at 564 Russell Road (near City of Albany) is an early season treasure for the Capital Region mountain biking community. Just beyond the playground lies a dedicated four-mile singletrack mountain bike trail system. The soil is a mixture of loam and sand, so it tends to dry quickly. The system is set up into four distinctly marked trails that connect to form one loop: red (1.0 miles), orange (1.6 miles), yellow (0.6 miles) and blue (0.7 miles). As you enter up the hill behind the playground, look for the red flags on your right and follow, and then keep all flags to your right.

The trail itself is relatively flat but does have some punchy climbs and short downhills. There are plenty of well-built trail challenges along the way to help develop your MTB skill sets such as log rolls, bridges, small jumps and ramps. There is always a go-around line for those of us just getting back into it, or for or for those trying to break a digital land speed record! For those with families, the playground at the base of the trail is a bonus and the trails can accommodate riders of any age. Please remember to go slow as you pass through the playground. (townofbethlehem.org)

Further west in the Capital Region, Thacher State Park (near Voorheesville) has been busy with a variety of projects over the last few years. This has included a partnership with the Saratoga Mountain Bike Association to build and maintain approximately 15 miles of singletrack trails. Hailes Cave Road is one access point through the new skills park (see below), but there's a $6 parking fee or use Empire Pass. In the northern portion of the park, use the Carrick Road trailhead and follow Fred Schroeder or Perimeter trail out of the parking lot. Or, you can also use the High Point trailhead off of Old Stage Road, though this is popular with hikers and it may be tough to park there on a weekend. Both northern options are free entrances that offer fun rocky trails with lots of views from the High Point and Hang Glider cliffs along the way.

The park has installed a mountain bike skills area, which includes a pump track and dirt jump park just at the end of Hailes Cave Road. Pump tracks teach riders the skill of "pumping" your bike forward over small roller jumps to pick up speed instead of pedaling. The jump park consists of several "tabletop" jumps – both rollable and jumpable. In that same area, there is also a series of small loop trails that act as a component of the skills area. (parks.ny.gov)

Heading north of the Capital Region, you'll find the Luther Forest STEP (Saratoga Technology Energy Park) trails located on 345 Hermes Road in Malta. Originally built by mountain bikers, they have officially been adopted by the Saratoga Technology Energy Park. The six miles of swoopy singletrack trails are hard packed sandy loam, resulting in a relatively "smooth" riding experience, as far as mountain biking goes, with a couple of short steep climbs and a few fun technical challenges to keep you on your toes. The trail can get a little confusing as it loops and crosses in various places. However, you can't really get lost as you are never far away from the road. Watch out for other trail users, as this is a multiuse area. (malta-town.org)

Heading further north, Gurney Lane Mountain Bike Park, located within the Town of Queensbury's Gurney Lane Recreation Area, has seven miles of singletrack and six miles of double-track mountain bike specific trails for year-round enjoyment. Gurney Lane has a variety of professionally designed and built trails: from extremely fun trails, technical rocky trails with hard lines and easier alternative lines, to wider bench cut trails featuring berms, rollers and endless amounts of flow. Gurney also connects to the Rush Pond trail with 2.6 miles of double-track and a matrix of unmarked singletrack trails to explore. (recreation.queensbury.net)

The Brant Lake Bike Park, a newly developed singletrack mountain biking destination, opens on Sunday, June 10 at 9am. The park is on land directly behind The Hub – a bike shop, café and craft beer pub – located at 27 Market Street in Brant Lake. The trails were designed and built by Wilderness Property Management, a local professional trail building company. Mountain bikers are familiar with their work at Gurney Lane in Queensbury and the MTB trails at Ski Bowl Park in North Creek. Grand opening festivities include a send-off ceremony, live music, and a tap-takeover by Common Roots Brewing at The Hub – and six miles of fresh singletrack mountain bike riding. The trails are free and open to the public. (thehubadk.com)

In the Adirondack High Peaks region, there has been steady growth of trail building over the last decade. The Barkeater Trail Alliance, a non-profit organization has been building, maintaining, and advocating for a system of community and backcountry trails for ski touring and mountain biking. They have built 50 miles of trails. They build and maintain trail systems in the towns of Wilmington, Lake Placid and Saranac Lake, as well as maintain the pump track and dirt jumps at the Wilmington Town Park.

According to BETA director Josh Wilson and member Keith McKeever, some of the better early season trails can be found in the Hardy Road-Beaver Brook trail system. Trails such as the Coniferous trail, Double Time and Twisted Pine are relatively flat, packed sandy loam singletrack with an absence of roots or rocks. Trails such as Make Believe have more climbing/descending with bermed switchbacks and a rolling trail through a maple beach forest in between. Just down the road is a newly finished Three Sisters trail that acts as a community connector trail between the Quaker Mountain trail and the Town of Wilmington.

Other early season trail recommendations include the Flume trail system in Wilmington and the Craig Wood trails in the Town of North Elba (near Lake Placid). Good places to start with in the Flume system include the lower areas such as Delta, Lower Connector and the Double Time trails. As you go higher up in elevation, the trail difficulty climbs as well.

Also in Wilmington, the Poor Man's Downhill trail is a three-mile singletrack downhill trail, which drops 1,200 vertical feet between the Whiteface Toll Road entrance down to the hamlet – near Up a Creek Restaurant and Leepoff Cycles. The Town of Wilmington offers a summer shuttle service at a minimal cost on Sundays from 1-4pm on June 17, July 1 and 15, August 5 and 19, and Sept. 2 and 16. (bikewilmingtonny.com)

Towards Lake Placid, check out the Craig Wood trail system. It is officially known as a "flow trail" with three miles of machine-built trails constructed in 2017. Flow trails generally feature packed terrain that generally has small jumps and bermed turns to keep your bike moving – and your face smiling ear to ear. The trails are owned by the Town of

AUTHOR'S VIEW OF THE DIRT JUMP LINE IN THACHER STATE PARK. JIM MACNAUGHTON

North Elba and are located adjacently to the Craig Wood Golf Course. On that note, please stay on marked trails and do not ride on or through the golf course. (betatrails.org)

From the Flume trails, you can also link up to the Whiteface Mountain Bike Park trail system that opens for the season on June 16 with expert, intermediate, beginner downhill trails, cross country trails and a new flow trail. A Whiteface lift ticket is required. Shuttle bus rides and bike, helmet and pad rentals are available.

Whiteface offers something for everyone. The trails accessed via Cloudsplitter Gondola are expert with lots of rocks, roots and drops. For riders looking for fast and fun trails, a shuttle bus runs twice an hour to access the trails on the lower half of the mountain. These trails are flowy and have some technical sections including small rocks and roots. The Whiteface crew is known for their excellent service and can help you match trail choices to your ability to help ensure a great experience. (downhillmike.com)

This list of trails to get you out the door is far from being all-inclusive. It is only a sampling of what's available to riders of all ages, leg and lung capacities. Please use this list as a starting point to explore and discover even more options. We are incredibly lucky to live in a time and a place where mountain biking trail systems are seemingly growing by the day. Take advantage of it – get out, get dirty, and keep the helmet side up!

HIKING

A Family-Friendly Way to Stay Active and Enjoy the Outdoors

By Thomas O'Grady

iking is a great activity to introduce children to the outdoors while developing their physical fitness and self-confidence. As a parent it was one activity that I was looking forward to participating in with my children. My goal was to gradually build their ability level, and then introduce them to more challenging hikes, so they would continue as they got older.

Last summer I found myself looking at a copy of "Views From on High: Fire Tower Trails in the Adirondacks and Catskills," by John Freeman and Jim Schneider. This sparked my childhood memory of hiking Hadley Mountain when the fire tower was decommissioned. However, I had remembered learning several years back that efforts had begun to restore many of New York's fire towers, including Hadley. Upon further research, I found that 25 towers throughout the Adirondacks, another five located south in the Catskills. and several more located "beyond the lines" were restored.

Fire Tower Challenge - As I read through the book I noticed info on how to complete the Adirondack Mountain Club's Fire Tower Challenge. An individual aspiring to complete the challenge would need to climb 18 of the 25 Adirondack peaks and all five of the Catskill peaks for a total of 23 fire tower visits. The challenge offered a patch for those who had documented their climbs and had the option of completing the challenge in the winter. As a competitive runner, my two young sons had been to numerous races, and usually enjoyed participating in the kids' runs. They particularly enjoyed the different race medals and awards. The patch for the Fire Tower Challenge would be a good long-term goal to work towards as a family, while enjoying the outdoors and building physical and mental strength along the way.

Challenge is rated on a scale according to difficulty. This four number rating system takes into account the total length and elevation gain of the trip, then assigns mountains with ratings of easy, moderate, strenuous or difficult. We made our first family trip in November, when our newborn daughter was over three months old. In planning this first trip, I wanted to start with an easy or moderate hike so that everyone would feel challenged, but not overwhelmed and disappointed if the travel time in the car was manageable so that the boys would stay occupied and the baby comfortable. To point out the beauty of nature to the boys, a good view of any remaining foliage at the top was another consideration. Based on all this criteria we decided to begin on Hadley Mountain in the Lake George region.

The Mountains: We set out to climb up Hadley on my son Theo's birthday and the boys were excited about this adventure. The drive up to Hadley offers a great prelude to the views you will see once on the summit, particularly if you are coming from south of the mountain, once you get to the final segment of the drive beyond Lake Luzerne. Our late start meant arriving at the trailhead in early afternoon. Not wanting to return to the car while it was getting dark, I understood that this trip would take a delicate balance between keeping the kids moving, and allowing them to explore the trails. Early on we stopped more to acclimate to the trail, take in the surroundings, and check out every rock and stick the boys could get their hands after we stopped for dinner on the way home to celebrate the accomplishment and our son Theo's birthday.

Our next adventure brought us back to the Adirondacks to hike Spruce and Kane mountains in February. On a long weekend that coincided with warmer weather we decided to set out on hikes two and three in our challenge. Spruce was an easy choice because it was a close neighbor to Hadley, and was easy for the boys to visualize how long the car ride would be. Located slightly to the south, Spruce is a shorter round-trip hike than Hadley by a half-mile and has about 500 feet less climbing. The hike up Spruce was our first winter hike so the boys were excited to see how snow and ice change your hiking experience.

The trail was well packed so it was just a matter of walking with our hiking boots and maneuvering around ice sections to reach the summit. The summit of Spruce is full of pine trees except for an opening leading to the fire tower. It is important to be careful at the top as there is an access road that leads up the other side of the mountain that is used by snowmobilers. The day we chose to hike we encountered more snowmobiles at the top than hikers. The fire tower itself is well maintained and the kids were excited to finally climb up one. As the tallest of the Adirondack towers, we were above all the surrounding trees with a breathtaking view of many snow-covered mountains. I was able to direct attention north towards the approximate location of Hadley.

We chose Kane Mountain for our third hike on the challenge. Kane is rated as a moderate hike, however at only 1.8 miles round-trip, and with 620 feet of climbing this is a rather unassuming moderate. The shorter distance and climb allowed the boys to really enjoy playing with the snow and sticks on the well-packed trail to the summit. As their second winter hike, the boys didn't think much of trekking around icy areas and through melted streams. Another tree covered summit, Kane offered spectacular views of Green and Canada lakes from the cabin of its fire tower. Our return trip brought us down the north side to complete a nice loop. The trailhead to Kane offers several paths to other well-marked trails should anyone want to add on to their trek. We were tempted to continue on more paths, however the boys were wet from playing, so we returned to the car and changed into warm clothes. Hike number three was completed.

Our fourth successful fire tower was Overlook Mountain in the Catskills. We had tried to climb Overlook on Easter weekend, however we arrived ill-prepared for how much snow was still remaining on the mountain. We used that experience as a learning lesson. Overlook was the most challenging of the hikes we had climbed as a family so far, in terms of distance and elevation gain. The kids were only able to make it about a mile up the mountain and were eager to make it to the summit.

During the drive down on Mother's Day weekend we took NY Route 32 to avoid traffic, take in the views, and point out some of the differences between the Catskills and Adirondacks. The trip on Route 32 from Albany takes you past Hunter Mountain, which is the tallest mountain on the fire tower challenge, and at 4,040 feet it's one of only two 4,000-footers in the Catskills. Overlook is one of the busier mountains and we met a full parking lot at the primary trailhead. A new overflow parking lot is a half-mile away through a newly constructed trail.

The climb up Overlook is steady though never very steep. And because the trail is another old jeep road it is well worn. The kids knew they were working but the effort was never too strenuous. In fact, their confidence from previous hikes had caused them to jog ahead during several portions of the trip. Overlook is a gem of a hike, especially for a family. The fire tower at the top is one of the sturdiest I've come across and the views from the top of the tower are magnificent. In addition to the fire tower views, there is an old observation cabin as well as a path to overlooks that provide the mountain with its name - and give the viewer some more panoramic scenes. After enjoying our time at the summit, we headed back down but we took a short break to explore the remains of Overlook Mountain House. This detour provided the kids with an opportunity to explore and prepare them for the descent.

Why the Challenge: The fire tower challenge was appealing to me for many of the reasons I was looking forward to introduce my sons to hiking. For me, hiking is a great way to stay physically fit and enjoy the outdoors. Because a majority of the Adirondack High Peaks are challenging, I did not feel comfortable taking a five- and seven-year-old out on these mountains to begin with. The challenge offers many suitable hikes that build a child's physical fitness and confidence. The climbing hike itself creates a leveling effect so that a fit adult also walks away feeling challenged.

The challenge also offers hiking options in nearly every region of the Adirondacks and Catskills. During each of the outings I've pointed out the differences in terrain, vegetation and other features. This variety offers a great opportunity to explore and provide learning experiences to people of all ages. The presence of a fire tower at the top of each mountain offers a tangible reward to work towards on each hike and also adds to the exploration involved. Checking off each mountain on the list offers a more long-term goal to work towards. Each time we go on a hike, the children gain more experience and I look forward to allowing them to become more involved with the planning. After each hike we typically stop for food, ice cream, or another treat or activity to complement the trip.

Considerations: Many things must be taken when planning the hikes involved in the challenge, including the length and elevation of a hike. Because of the climbing involved and the uneven nature of trails, it will take considerably longer to walk a mile on a mountain than it will on a flat-paved surface. The gear you need or want to bring will largely depend on the season. Later spring hikes will typically require bug repellent and sunscreen. Winter hikers should bring snowshoes and be prepared for shorter daylight. Because the mountains are carry-in/out it is important to plan appropriately for the amount of food and water to bring. Several of the hikes have places to stop and picnic, although you should consider all the added weight you'll be carrying.

The Views: None of the hikes have disappointed so far with their views. Whether the summit is bald or not, the fire tower will raise an individual above any trees. Not all mountains on the challenge list are particularly high, although they contain a tower at the top because they are usually the highest mountain in their particular region or range. This combination ensures very nice views.

Other Hiking Challenges - I first picked up "Views From on High" with the intention of working on the adventures with my children. I saw the challenge initially as way to get them active and enjoying the outdoors. I also thought the hikes would be a good prelude to bigger trips to the Adirondack High Peaks. But after starting the challenge I quickly realized that each of the hikes were enjoyable on their own. Having done most of my hiking in the High Peaks and Lake George region, the fire tower hikes were making me as aware of other enjoyable places to visit as they were my children.

Additionally, I began to become aware of other hiking challenges in northeastern New York. For those who are interested, you'll find that some of the challenges listed have at least one hike that overlaps with another. For instance, several of the hikes in the Fire Tower Challenge are included in other challenges. Because you are hiking one mountain and the trip counts as two, this proves as a good jumping off point. Prevention of PART ONE Type 2 Diabetes

By Paul E. Lemanski, MD, MS, FACP

Editor's Note: This is the 83rd in a series on optimal diet and lifestyle to help prevent and treat disease. Any planned change in diet, exercise or treatment should be discussed with and approved by your personal physician before implementation. The help of a registered dietitian in the implementation of dietary changes is strongly recommended.

Medicines are a mainstay of American life and the healthcare system, not only because they are perceived to work by the individuals taking them, but also because their benefit may be shown by the objective assessment of scientific study. Clinical research trials have shown that some of the medicines of Western science may reduce the risk of heart attacks, strokes and cardiovascular death, while others may reduce certain types of cancer.

In the first 82 installments of the Non-Medicated Life, informed diet and lifestyle have been shown to accomplish naturally for the majority of individuals, many, if not most of the benefits of medications in the prevention and treatment of chronic medical conditions. Moreover, as a medical intervention they may accomplish such benefits with fewer side effects, may reduce the number and amount of medication, and may allow actual discontinuation of medication. However, in some cases informed diet and lifestyle prove superior to medication. This is especially true for the prevention and remission of type 2 diabetes mellitus.

This is Part One to address prevention of type 2 diabetes. Part Two, in the August 2018 issue, will address remission of type 2 diabetes.

PREVENTION

Type 2 diabetes is a disease characterized by insulin resistance. Individuals with type 2 diabetes, unlike individuals with type 1 diabetes, have sufficient insulin but that insulin does not work properly. Insulin is a hormone produced by islet cells in the pancreas. Insulin is needed for the transfer of glucose from the blood stream in to the cells of the body; the only exception to this is the brain. It is sometimes helpful to think of insulin as the activator of a pump on the surface of cells which takes glucose from the bloodstream and brings it in to the cell. Each cell has a receptor for insulin on its surface. The pump is activated when a molecule of insulin enters the receptor.

In individuals with prediabetes (and diabetes), there is a change in the shape of the receptor, which requires more insulin to achieve activation of the pump. In an attempt to control blood sugar, excess levels of insulin in the blood is required, and the pancreas must increases insulin production markedly. Over the years, this excess insulin production overworks the islet cells of the pancreas causing them to burn out. By the time a diagnosis of type 2 diabetes is made, an elevated fasting blood sugar (or elevated hemoglobin ALc), 50 to 70% of the islet cells may be lost to such burnout. Since islet cells, once lost, cannot be replaced it is important to know if there is a way to prevent their loss in the first place. Thankfully there is.

Pre-diabetes is a condition brought about by increase in bodyweight in individuals with a genetic predisposition for diabetes. A genetic predisposition is conferred by a family history of type 2 diabetes. In a study done a number of years ago called the Diabetes Prevention Program, individuals who were pre-diabetic, could decrease conversion to type 2 diabetes by 57% with the loss of 5 to 7% of body weight. They could also decrease conversion by 30% with the use of the drug metformin. In this case, lifestyle change accompanied by weight loss was twice as powerful as medication.

As there are 25 million Americans with diabetes and approximately 70 million Americans with prediabetes, and those with prediabetes are converting to type 2 diabetes at a rate of 11% per year, this would suggest in 10 years close to 100 million Americans will have diabetes unless something is done about it. As a consequence, the Centers for Disease Control has put together a national diabetes prevention program to teach those at risk how to live a healthy lifestyle, exercise, and lose weight long-term so as to prevent new cases of type 2 diabetes.

The first step in using such a program is to first identify if you have prediabetes. If you are overweight (body mass index greater than 25.0, but less than 30), or obese (BMI over 30), and have a family history of diabetes, you are at risk. BMI = weight in pounds, multiplied by 703, divided by height in inches squared. Such individuals should have their physician obtain a fasting blood sugar and/or a hemoglobin A1c. Hemoglobin A1c is a non-fasting blood test that can give a three-month average blood sugar result. Fasting blood sugar over 100 mg/dl, but less than 126 mg/dl is consistent with prediabetes. Hemoglobin A1c over 5.7 and 6.4 inclusive is also consistent with prediabetes. Women with a history of diabetes during pregnancy, even if blood sugars post-delivery became normal, also are at risk.

Once prediabetes is identified, the National Diabetes Prevention Program may have classes in your area that you can attend. Alternatively, you can work with your primary care physician and a dietitian to help with weight loss and establishing a healthy lifestyle. Even if you are 30 pounds above your ideal body weight, it is not necessary to lose all 30 pounds to prevent diabetes. A 5-foot, 4-inch woman weighing 200 pounds and having a BMI of 34, would need to lose only 5 to 7% of her body weight or 10 to 14 lbs. in order to decrease likelihood of conversion to diabetes by 57%. Of course, those 10 to 14 lbs. would need to be kept off in order to keep diabetes at bay.

Even in the absence of weight loss, two other interventions can help lower blood sugar and prevent progression to diabetes: exercise and the avoidance of sugar and sweet foods and/or foods with high glycemic index. GI refers to the rate that a carbohydrate containing food appears in the blood stream as glucose. Exercise should be a moderate, aerobic exercise such as brisk walking for 30 minutes, five times a week. The complete avoidance of sugar and sweet foods is helpful depending upon the amount of such foods that are consumed with the more consumed at baseline yielding the biggest improvement with cessation. Identifying foods with a higher GI can prove very helpful to further lower risk, once sugar and sweet foods are avoided.

The glycemic index scale is from 0 to 100, with glucose (simple sugar) equal to 100, and low glycemic foods defined as less than 55 on the scale. Foods with a high glycemic index are white bread or a bagel (GI = 74), white rice (GI = 73), and russet potatoes (GI = 78). These high GI foods may cause a spike in blood sugar and predispose you to the development of diabetes. Root vegetables generally have higher GI than leafy vegetables. Sweet fruits, such as bananas and pineapples, have a higher GI than less sweet fruits such as apples, pears, and berries.

In summary, type 2 diabetes mellitus may be prevented. First, those with prediabetes need to be identified from the group of individuals at potential risk. Second, a strategy for reducing the risk of progression to diabetes has to be implemented. The National Diabetes Prevention Program can help to reduce body weight, foster healthy eating, and increase exercise habits. The loss of only 5 to 7% of body weight in an overweight or obese person may reduce conversion to type 2 diabetes by 57%. Additionally, in the absence of weight loss, daily aerobic exercise, the avoidance of sugar and sweet foods, and consuming foods with a glycemic index less than 55 may also be

In this way, a healthy lifestyle and diet as part of the Non-Medicated Life, may help prevent the development of diabetes more powerfully than medication. Stay tuned for Part Two (August 2018) to learn how a similar approach may help to result in the actual remission of type 2 diabetes.

2017 SILKS & SATINS 5K IN

ERICA MILLER/THE DAILY GAZETTE

Even more inspirational, proceeds support our own New York Special Olympics. As I go through my paces, I keep their motto in mind, "Let me win, but if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt." There are many individual and team award categories. And while there is naturally only one winner, we are all champions when we cross the start line to pursue our individual goals. In keeping with this theme of fellowship, please consider forming a team. Teams can be all male or female or any combination of male and female, up to seven total, with the top five scoring.

Finally, plan on celebrating with the first 1,000 registered runners who receive free admission passes to the Saratoga Race Track, the National Museum of Racing, and that all-important shower at the Saratoga Regional YMCA. (silksandsatins5k.com)

Rapidly becoming a staple is the fifth annual Saratoga Springs Half Marathon, Relay & 5K on Sunday, July 8, a fast and beautiful tour of the Saratoga Spa State Park. Even if the day is warm, 13.1 miles will seem less so as you weave in and out of green spaces on shaded, almost traffic-free roads. Particularly impressive is the majestic, cathedral-like setting of the Avenue of the Pines. The two-person relay teams negotiate 6.7- and 6.4-mile loops, with enough vibe to push forward those individuals running a second loop.

The Saratoga Springs 5K walk/run is ideal for family and friends. All participants receive technical shirts, finisher medals, refreshments and make-your-own goodie bag. The race benefits Strong to Serve, with 20% of your entry fees supporting orphans in third world countries. Almost $19,000 has been raised to cover six months of anti-seizure and epilepsy medicine, plus 1,500 liters of milk and 2,000 pounds of grains for 86 needy disabled orphans in Nicaragua. (saratogaspringshalf.com)

The final event in the Saratoga area is the Saratoga Stryders Camp Saratoga 5K Trail Series at Wilton Wildlife Preserve & Park on Mondays at 6:15pm on June 25, July 9, July 23, August 6 and August 20, perfect for those who like to reserve their weekends for hiking, paddling or camping. These events are a throwback to a simpler time, when $5 race fees were pay-at-the-door and numbered popsicle sticks recorded your place. Competition is hot for dollar store raffle prizes and that last slice of watermelon.

Those who manage all five dates are eligible for overall and age-graded awards, as well as the most difficult of all: continual improvement. 9 Miles East Farm will be there as well to insure a hassle-free supper with their meals, pizza and salads, where you can preorder a pizza for your post-race dining. Proceeds from the series benefit the Wilton Wildlife Preserve & Park. (saratogastryders.com)

Next, try the 50th annual Colonie Summer Track Series on Tuesdays at 6pm from June 13-July 31 at the Colonie High School Track.

Distances include a one-mile race walk, oneand two-mile runs, relays and 100-, 200-, 400and 800-meter dashes, with the 50-meter dash reserved for kids up to 12 years old. June 26 will feature the storied Colonie Mile and July 24 will be Ribbon Night. Sponsored by Hudson Mohawk Road Runners Club, the Summer Track program is meant for fun and recreation to bring friends and family together to enjoy the sport of racing and to participate in some good old fashion competition.

"Depending on weather and when meets are run, we get 100 to 200 people competing," said meet director Frank Myers. "Recreation means you get a race, races or field events and you will verbally be told your time and place. Recreation also means free entry for 50 years!" The Summer Track Program relies on volunteer high school coaches. "We don't get involved with coaching in the summer," Frank said. "People come to the track already coached or not coached as the case may be." With a common passion for running and a desire to participate, racers come in all ages, sizes and walks of life. (hmrrc.com)

Also presented by HMRRC is the 24th annual Indian Ladder Trail Run with 15K and 5K runs on Sunday, July 22 at Thacher State Park near Voorheesville. Even if you have run this race countless times before, you are guaranteed a PR, as the relocation from Haile's Cave to the Green House Picnic Area will necessitate an entirely new short route and a "something old, something new" longer version. For you veterans, this means you have to pay attention as familiar trails could be approached backwards, forwards or upside down in the event of an unplanned faceplant. The well-marked courses will have water/aid stations along the way — they're hilly and can be muddy. Race fees are inexpensive with T-shirts to first 200, but director Mark Vermilyea cautions that Thacher has a new $6 park fee so bring cash or your Empire pass for free entry. The course may be different, one thing, though, remains the same; you can still count on generous scoops of ice cream at the finish! (hmrrc.com)

Finally, venture to Chestertown in the Adirondacks for the 14th annual Hudson Headwaters Health Network's Care for Kids 5K Run & Fitness Walk on Sunday, July 29. Race director Jessica Rubin anticipates 400-450 participants and boasts it is 'the Adirondack's most family-friendly 5K,' which traces a "mostly flat with some uphill" route alongside the scenic Schroon River. Awards are unusually age-group friendly with two-year divisions starting from age seven, five year divisions from the 20s on, and ten year groupings for 70s and 80s.

The Care for Kids 5K begins at 2431 Schroon River Road in Chestertown and ends at the YMCA Adirondack Outreach Center (148 Tannery Road) in Brant Lake. A free shuttle will transport participants and spectators from the finish line back to the start. Proceeds benefit pediatric program at HHHN. (runsignup.com)

Accent your summer calendar with these events and you will emerge with new running buddies and a greater appreciation of our region.
